BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, MAY 29, 1904.

It Seems Almost a Shame to Disturb This Pig.

He is So Happy in His Trough, So Pleased With Himself, So Horrified at a Suggestion of Interference It Seems Really a Pity to Prick Him, Even Gently, but He MUST Be Disturbed the General Welfare Demands it.

ERE in the picture behold the degenerated descendant of the golden calf.

This creature, plunged in money, enthroned in comfort and power, is the great sacred animal of America to-day. The people bow down to him; he takes himself most seriously.

Grunting and wallowing, ignoring the rights of others, filling himself to repletion, he believes that he is the impersonation of all that is great and good and RESPECTABLE.

He despises and loathes sincerely those that would disturb his peace.

You have heard many of the sayings of this sacred hog without knowing whence they came.

You hear loud grunting about "the newspapers that stir up class hatred." That grunt is really aimed at the newspapers that, with statements of truth and revelations of fraud, disturb the repose of the sacred gold pig of Wall Street.

Another voice declares that yellow journalism, and the labor unions, and the genuine Democracy of the country are seeking to destroy VESTED RIGHTS, to undermine prosperity. This is only once more the voice of the golden pig of high finance, which seizes what he has not EARNED and eats what he has not PRODUCED.

The animal pictured here represents the issue in America to-day very fairly.

The pig in his trough, wallowing in money, represents the moral attitude of the men that steal the millions and hundreds of millions of the public, and constantly grant for more.

The pig's nature—a mean, unworthy nature—is that of the modern swindling trust financier, whom the overfed pig so well typifies.

Dead to moral sense is this pig. He believes that others, like himself, care only for money. He believes that it is impossible to have too much or enough of it.

Incapable of generous instincts himself, he believes that generosity and a real sense of justice do not exist.

Did you ever in your boyhood stir up a living pig in his muddy pen?

How sincerely indignant was his grunting, how genuine his wrath and disapproval, as he snorted about! If he could have spoken he would have said that in disturbing his rest you had disturbed that which was most sacred in the land.

So it is with this GOLDEN pig, lord of the trust pen and monopolist of the nation's wealth.

When you hear an attack on genuine yellow journalism follow up the sound. You will find that, as a rule, it comes from the neighborhood of this golden pig's abode.

The other day a weekly newspaper owned by J. Pierpont Morgan criticised yellow journalism in high and lofty moral tones. "Yellow journalism menaces society—it is a great danger," said the voice in the weekly.

But it was only the same old pig grunting through an educated hired man. What the grunting really meant was that yellow journalism had disturbed the happy pig of the Shipbuilding Trust, the well-fed pig of the Steel Trust and others of the same porcine family.

"Every man has in his heart a hog asleep," said Emile Zola.

In the heart of the American people—the financial Wall Street Hear!—there is a hog of great size and power. But he is not asleep. He needs to be put asleep—to be put into that long sleep which will know no waking.

Small business men who have come into contact with him know his character to their cost. The American people are getting to know him better every day. They see the marks of his hoof in their bills for meat, for coal, for gas, for rent.

Keep this picture in your mind. It is a picture of real life. Remember that this pig is a most artistic and various grunter. He has all kinds of writers, all kinds of speakers to do his grunting and to do his talking and writing.

Very respectable editors take his part, clergymen speak for him and to him, as he leans back in his pew. Politicians by the thousands do his work for a little of the gold that drops from his trough. He has his servants in the Senate and the House, on the Bench and in our State Legislatures.

He is a great and a powerful pig. His skin is thick, his bristles coarse.

But the pricking of the yellow pen goes through and leaves a mark.

The power of opinion is stronger than he. His day will come, as comes the day of all the pigs.

He will be scalded, scraped, hung up, divided into useful quarters, and serve thereafter only in history, as a useful warning, like his relatives that ran down into the sea.

While he lives, fattens and rules among you, do not be deceived by him. Do not be fooled by his variegated grunting. Do not vote for his candidates. Do not be pig-riled—even though the pig be of solid gold and mighty among his kind.

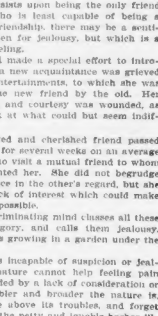

Stenographer, cheerfully. "Mostly it makes 'em cross-eyed to look at, too—a man is generous before he is generous, and before she is generous, and before she squares up with the

BOSTON MOTHERS TOLD BY AN EXPERT TRAINED NURSE HOW TO BATHE BABY IN THE LATEST SCIENTIFIC WAY

Miss Frund, Matron of Tyler Street Day Nursery, Describes the Daily Plunge in the Tub Which Is Good for a Tiny Infant.

BOW to bathe the baby in the latest scientific manner is explained for the benefit of Boston mothers in an interesting article to the BOSTON AMERICAN by Miss Frund, a trained nurse and matron of the Tyler Street Day Nursery.

"The day is past," Miss Frund says, "when the tiny baby gets only an occasional sponge bath. The infant of today has its daily plunge, and comes forth from the tub rosy and drowsy. It is no longer considered so delicate or frail that the mother fears a real dip in the tub will be injurious. Back Bay mothers and mothers in the tenement district alike are beginning to realize the importance of the bath in the life of their offspring."

The cult of cleanliness is spreading so generally that nurses now receive lectures on baby bathing as a part of their training.

A practical demonstration of a scientifically bathed baby was given a day or two ago in the surgical amphitheatre of the City Hospital before a large gathering of mothers.

Here is what Miss Frund has to say on the subject:

By Miss Frund,
Matron of Tyler Street Day Nursery.
Many Boston mothers are now turning their attention toward the scientific bathing of their babies. The day is past when the baby was bathed in the lap of the mother or some other person. The washing process is begun in the tub. The baby is placed in the tub, and the mother or nurse dips the baby in the water. The baby is then washed with soap and water. The baby is then rinsed with clean water. The baby is then dried with a towel. The baby is then dressed in clean clothes.

It is a day old. In twelve days or two weeks after birth the child can be placed in the tub.

Before that age the baby should receive everything should be in readiness. The baby basket of toilet articles is placed near the tub.

The tub should be partly filled with hot water, with a pitcher of cold water nearby, so the temperature may be lowered. Sterile water only should be used.

The temperature of the water should never be hurried at, but should always be ascertained by a thermometer. At birth the water for the bath should be 98 degrees, at three weeks of age 96 degrees, and from one to six months old the water used should be 90 degrees.

First the baby's head should be washed with a soft gauze or old linen cloth. The soap should always be used. The head is rinsed gently and quickly. Then the eyes are washed with clear water, not using the same cloth with which the head was washed. The baby's face should be washed with a small piece of absorbent cotton dipped in sterile water. The little face should never be rubbed, but patted dry with a soft towel.

While the baby's face is being washed the body should be wrapped in the soft blanket that is placed on the mother's lap.

before the bath begins. Next the body is washed, and the head should be covered with a dry towel. Quickly and deftly the little one's body should be rubbed gently with the soiled wash cloth or sponge.

Baby Should Be Allowed to Kick and Splash in the Tub, But Only for a Few Seconds.

As soon as this is done the baby is lifted gently and placed in the tub, and allowed to kick and splash for a few seconds. If a baby is frightened at the water, a very good way for the first few times is to place a big towel over the top and lower the baby on the towel gradually into the water.

The mother or nurse should hold the baby firmly by placing the left hand beneath the head and by grasping the two ankles in the fingers of the right hand. Slowly and carefully place the baby in the tub, so as to avoid a sudden shock.

It is surprising how soon the baby learns to love the bath and will crawl and jump happily in the tub.

Back Bay Mothers and Mothers in Tenement District Alike Are Beginning to Realize Importance of Bath to Offspring.

to love the bath and will crawl and jump happily in the tub.

A baby's clothing must previously be a simple outfit. It should consist of one piece, the head, an undershirt of sleeveless white, a flannel petticoat without sleeves, and a thin muslin or flannel slip.

All the means must be taken to keep the baby as cool as possible in contact with the water's skin. The different articles of clothing should be fitted into each other, and all slipped on at once.

Never Put a Baby's Clothes

On Over the Head, Always

Pull Them Up From Feet

Never put a baby's clothing on over its head. Always pull the clothes up from the feet. They should button all the way down the front, thus doing away with strain of pulling on the clothes.

Anything that burdens up the back is liable to hurt the little one's back, because the back is the most sensitive part of the body. The baby's back is a broad canvas with a canvas back. The stitches must be made gently, for the baby's head is easily injured. Also, the tiny finger nails should be watched and kept short.

For the first two months after birth a baby should be disturbed as little as possible. It should sleep nearly all of the time. At night it can be undressed at about a cry or at feeding time, and then it should not be dressed again until the next morning at about 11, when it has its plunge bath.

When the baby cries it should not be taken up and petted or trooled, but should be looked at and, if it is comfortable, then allowed to cry.

A baby must be expected to cry vigorously at least half an hour each day to expand its lungs and develop the muscles of the chest.

Here at the nursery everything is done to encourage cleanliness among the working mothers who leave their children here for the day. We do not keep the babies who come here dirty, but compel the mothers to take them home and wash them.

RUSSIAN CHILDREN A MARVEL IN THE LANGUAGES.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

London, May 28.—Many elements go to make up the Russian national character. We may look on Russia as the enemy of freedom, the friend of the Jews, the slave of officialdom, but we cannot disregard the richness of intellectual Russia.

They are a wonderful faculty for languages. It is not extraordinary to find a child of twelve belonging to the cultured classes able to speak and write intelligently in four foreign languages.

Two children—daughter and son of a Russian nobleman—were with all their years, in a recent English household, conversing in four languages. The father, a man of letters and knowledge, the mother, a woman of letters and knowledge, the daughter, a girl of twelve, the son, a boy of ten, were all able to converse in four languages.

GIRL CHAMPION TELLS HOW SHE BROKE JUMPING RECORD

Miss Margaret Joyce Attributes Her Recent Success to Constant Training, Plenty of Exercise and Sleeping Well

TO constant training, plenty of exercise and eating and sleeping well, Miss Margaret Joyce, the young woman, who, with Miss Ann Brown, broke the world's record for women in the running high jump at the exhibition of the Ward Nine Gymnasium, on Harrison Avenue, at Brighton, last week, attributes her success. Any girl, she says, with the proper incentive, the right training and the determination to do or die, can accomplish the same feat.

An added incentive in Miss Joyce's case was a joking remark made by her sweetheart that she would be beaten. Miss Joyce believes she can do even better than four feet, four inches, the height which she has reached.

The secret of my success in athletic events I have participated in is constant training, plenty of outdoor exercise and eating and sleeping well.

It is a shame to see so many girls sickly when they could be healthy and happy just as well. If they would only try to live as I have done they would soon come to the conclusion that it is unnecessary for them to go about unhappy because they are not well.

HEARST SUIT AND SUPREME COURT DECISION RESULTING FROM IT DEATH BLOW TO ALL IN AWFUL COMBINATIONS

ORDER COMPELLING "DIVINE RIGHT" BAER TO PRODUCE COAL ROAD'S BOOKS

"ORDERED, adjudged and decreed that George F. Baer be, and is hereby required and directed to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the 24th day of May, 1904, at 11 o'clock a. m., and there and then produce before the Interstate Commerce Commission, subject to its direction, all contracts for the purchase of anthracite coal entered into since Jan. 1, 1901, between the Lehigh Valley Coal Company and any producers of anthracite coal or owners or operators of anthracite coal mines."

"TO BE CONGRATULATED."

By John R. Dos Passos.

GOOD! GOOD! SAYS ATTY-GEN. CUNNEEN.

By Attorney-General Cunnéeen.

GOOD! Good! I congratulate Mr. Hearst and his counsel, Mr. Shearn, most cordially on their victory. The decision is of far-reaching importance, as it means the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to secure facts necessary for their information and the information of the public dealing with them. The decision does not in any way affect the application now before the New York American for proceedings against the Coal Trust, but it sustains the opinion I expressed in my annual report that the United States authorities were better equipped to deal with the questions involved than the State authorities.

"CLEAR-CUT VICTORY."

By Delancey Nicholl.

MR. HEARST has won a clear-cut and well-defined victory. The rights of the people have been upheld and the Supreme Court has supported Mr. Hearst's contention that the Coal Trust must submit its books and papers and answer questions put to it by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

HARVARD GRADUATE DESCRIBES HIS TORTURES AND AGONIES AT SHILOH

Rev. Nathan H. Harriman Tells How He Was Punished by Cruelties and Torments, Sandford's Followers Think Him a King

Not Even Infants Exempt From the Terrible Discipline of the "Holy Ghost and Us" Leader in His Maine Community

REV. NATHAN HARRIMAN of No. 7 Harold street, Boston, a Harvard graduate, in a statement to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, makes sensational charges against Frank W. Sandford, organizer, leader and general overseer of the Holy Ghost and Us Society, of Shiloh, Me., whom the Supreme Judicial Court of Franklin County, Me., after a sensational trial lasting three days, found guilty of manslaughter in causing the death of fourteen-year-old Leander A. Bartlett.

Unparalleled cruelty, trickery in finance, craft in discipline, deception, duplicity and a subtlety of cunning almost incredible, he says, have been practiced upon the thousands of followers until they regard him as King and believe he has the power to consign to Hell all who incur his displeasure.

Here is his statement to the AMERICAN:

BY REV. NATHAN H. HARRIMAN.
I have known Frank W. Sandford for a number of years. I met him in Boston, Maine, and soon after I joined the Holy Ghost and Us Society, of which he was the leader. He is a man of great power and influence, and his followers are very devoted to him.

Shiloh is ostensibly a Bible school, but it is really a community in which Mr. Sandford is King. He insists upon and obtains an adulation from his followers bordering on worship. To get this he has developed the subtlest system of human enslavement I have ever known.

It is said that he is demonstrated by a profound knowledge of the Bible, and that he is a man of great power and influence, and his followers are very devoted to him.

Determined to Free Chief.

I am a patient, free chief, and I am determined to free him. I have known him for a number of years, and I have seen him in his most private life. He is a man of great power and influence, and his followers are very devoted to him.

There are many who are devoted to him, and they are very devoted to him. He is a man of great power and influence, and his followers are very devoted to him.

Medical Examination. I have been examined by a number of medical men, and they have all found me to be in good health. I am a patient, free chief, and I am determined to free him.

This shows the shocking cruelty as the case of the child, and that he would risk the life of his only son for a mere freak of religious frenzy.

on a Poor Slegosaurus.

Great Britain, Hulton-Deane

There was once a man who had a peach of an animal, with a tail like a battering ram, that —was called a Siegosaurus!

Every time the man would swat this animal on the nose with a club that weighed about fifty pounds the brute would bellow —like an operatic chorus!

Well, one fine day, Mr. Stonehatchet Butt-in, of the S. P. C. A., arrested the man for disturbing the peace -and took him off to court!

The Siegosaurus, being a friendly sort of leviathan, began to lick the nuda's face with his tongue, which was like a steel file.

- and it was lots of sport!

Then the creature wagged his tail, and every man whom he carressed felt as if he had been struck by an automobile.

—with great velocity

Thereupon the man began to soak his faithful Slegosaurus again, and this time every man in court chimed in:

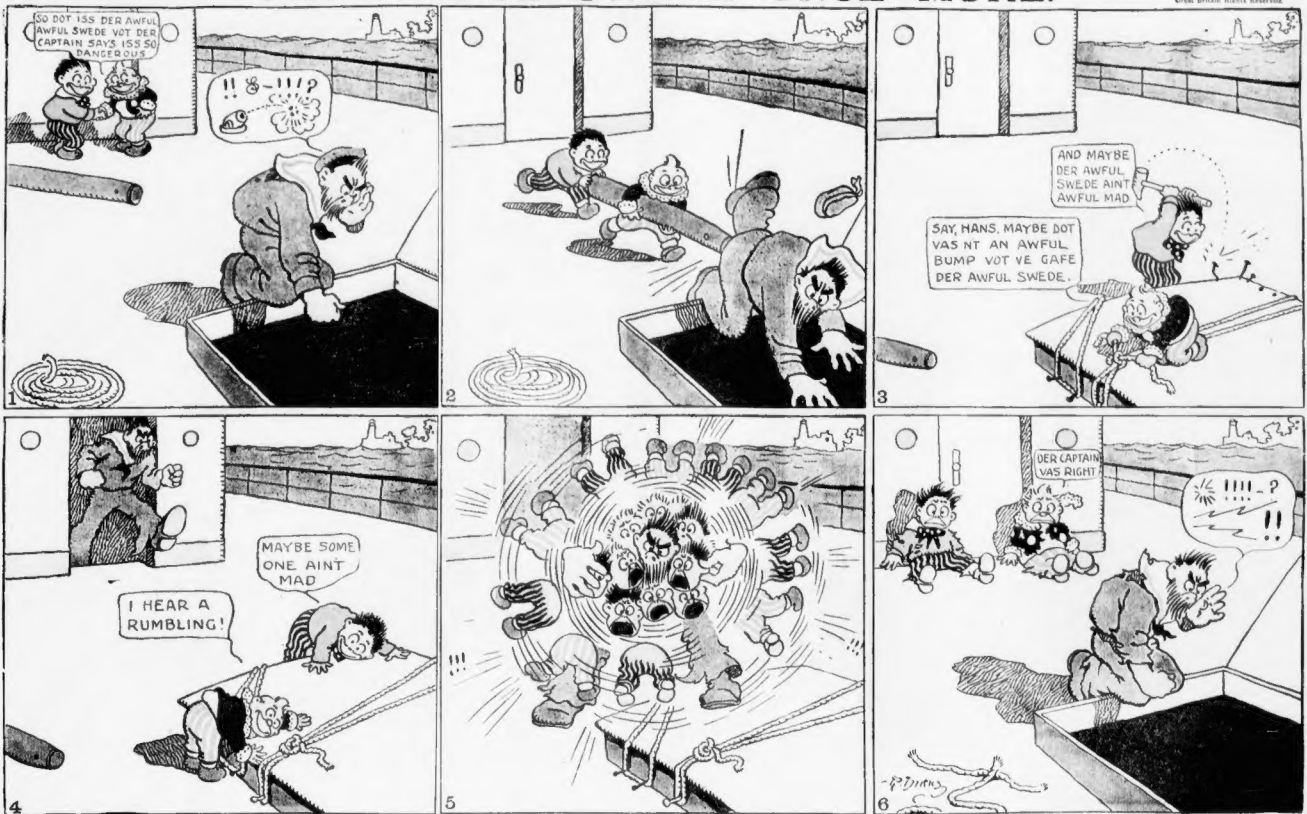

—“Oh, soak him one for me!”
